Discussion: Subsection 407.130(g) recognizes the equivalence of the American Montessori Society coursework to college child care and child development coursework by allowing its substitution for those courses. A holder of certain Montessori credentials qualifies as a day care director without any further college training under 407.130(g). Montessori credentials also substitute for academic credit at some colleges and universities. While the American Montessori Society has recently changed the Preprimary Credential (ages 3-6) to the Early Childhood Credential (ages 2½-6), their Infant and Toddler Credential (ages birth-3) was always offered separately. American Montessori International has not changed the names of their credentials since the effective date of this section.

Response: A child care director with 60 semester hours of college credit may substitute coursework taken to obtain the American Montessori Society’s Infant and Toddler Credential for the 18 hours of Early Child Education required in Section 407.130.
